Protecting the Public Water Supply

Backflow prevention devices help protect the District's drinking water system by preventing contaminated water from flowing back into the public water supply.

Annual Backflow Testing

California requires backflow prevention devices to be tested annually by a certified backflow tester. Annual testing helps ensure your device is operating properly and continues to protect the public water system.

What Is a Backflow Prevention Device?

A backflow prevention device is installed on a property's water service to ensure water flows in only one direction, helping prevent contaminants from entering the public water system.

Why Is Annual Testing Required?

Backflow prevention assemblies are mechanical devices that can wear over time. Annual testing verifies that the assembly is functioning correctly and helps maintain the safety and reliability of the District's water system.
